Mali Workshop Project January 16, 2010 Bayera, Dangriga, BELIZE

A REPORT (updated February 2010)

Background

Buyei Juan Lambey Institute is a legal entity that came into being in 2000. The leaders, Mr. Eugene Hernandez and the late Buyei John Mariano saw the Institute as an engine for education in general regarding Garifunaduo and in particular the role and significance of the Dabuyaba. Both Mr. Hernandez and Mr. Mariano returned to Dangriga from the United States upon retirement, and along with their spouses and other family members have contributed immensely to the Dangriga community. Through the initiatives of Mr. Hernandez and Mr. Mariano, the Buyei Juan Lambey Institute has conducted among other activities, summer workshops in drumming and wanaragua dancing, skills training for income generation, exhibition of Garifuna artifacts, experimented in aqua-fishing, and gave support to hana and drum making by Mr. Kapi Mariano.

The Mali workshop resulted from a request by Baba John Mariano just before his illness and passing in September 2009. He saw the need for such continuous activities as he considered the Dabuyaba as central to Garifunaduo. This workshop was also in honour of Mr. Eugene Hernandez and in remembrance of Buyei John Mariano for their many contributions. It is a project as the meaning connotes some continuation in this area.

The Mali workshop project initiative was organized and sponsored by the Myrtle Palacio family grouping through the Buyei Juan Lambey Institute. It came to fruition with the support and confidence of Cannon Jerris Jones Valentine, Pastor of Christ the King Anglican Church of Dangriga, Belize. Cannon Valentine is the foremost knowledgeable person in every aspect of the Dugu ceremony from the drumming to awisahani and the calling of the uyenu. He is one of possibly three persons in Dangriga who can call the Mali. Cannon Valentine organized the agenda and was the primary facilitator for the workshop.

The Workshop

The workshop was held on Saturday, January 16, 2010 at Bayera, in Dangriga, Belize. It was the first sunny and dry day in approximately two weeks in Belize, with a gentle sea breeze blowing from the Caribbean. Bayera was the ideal venue, being the location of the Baba John Dabuyaba, which is positioned immediately in front of the sea. After the sending out the call for the workshop, the feedback was that there would be a maximum of 20 participants. By 10:30 a.m. on the day of the workshop, some 58 persons had registered and through the flexibility and initiative of Ms. Lilly the cook, we were able to provide food for a total of 64 participants.

After the welcome and introduction by Ms. Myrtle Palacio, Mr. Roy Cayetano gave an overview of our history and incorporated that with the object for a Dugu and symbolic meanings for the drums etc. Several questions were asked of Mr. Cayetano on his presentation leading to a lively discussion. After a short break Cannon Valentine led the discussion to the Mali—its significance, the symbols of the movements of the drums, the sisira and the calling of the Mali. Several questions were fielded, a few not directly on the topic that Cannon Valentine kindly guided to the satisfaction of the participants who continued the discussion into the lunch break. Lunch consisted of darasa or ereba with fish or chicken and a coleslaw, pound cake and citrus juice.

Lunch was followed by the practice of the call and response of the Mali, which was introduced by Cannon Valentine, and this time utilizing the drums (the music). He demonstrated the importance of synchronizing the call with the movements of the drums--up and down. Ms Gwen Nunez Gonzalez willingly exercised the calling of the Mali during the practical. While this was new experience to some, it was reinforcement for others.

A full Mali was conducted with participants putting what they learnt into practice with Cannon Valentine critically looking on. The participation of the youth who were fully engaged was very promising. The Dabuyaba rocked, literally, with enthusiasm and confidence. The workshop ended with chururuti and awesahani....and with calls for more. The “Chiquita Cola” piece was a hit.

Mali—An Overview

The Garifuna word malí derives from the verb ámaliha and/or the noun ámalihaní. The action word (verb) ámaliha means in English, to placate, to appease or to mollify. Similarly, ámalihaní as the noun means the placation of; and the term malí is popularly used for the placating of the Gubida (spirits) in the Dügú ceremony. Presided over by a Buyei, the Dügú takes place in the Dabuyaba (ancestral house) and the Mali is one ritual in the ceremony. While the primary objective of the Dügú ceremony is to mollify the Gubida by yielding concessions or to pacify by granting demands made by the Ahari (Ancestral spirits), the Mali is one of the most important and sacred aspects in the entire Dügú ceremony, in terms of obtaining the objective. The belief is that the Mali also repairs damaged relationships, and after reconciliation and repentance, there is joy and satisfaction. There are three drums and the three drummers stand and move around playing the drums throughout the Mali, which lasts approximately 36 minutes. The middle drum is referred to as the anighi (heart). The other musical instrument is the sisira which is usually played by the Buyei. Please note that the photographs in this report show the practical aspects of the workshop; so that the person playing the sisira is not a Buyei and that this was only a demonstration of the Mali ceremony.

The word for sun and day (weyu) in Garifuna is the same. The fact that the earth is divided into two—day and night, and is further divided into morning and evening, twilight and deep sleep is very much respected in Garifuna rituals and belief systems.

For example, it is believed that bad spirits roam the earth around mid-day and mid-night and therefore drums are not played in the Dabuyaba at those times; and in times past children were not to be found on the road/street around mid-day. The use of the rida (calabash) of water with two pieces of coconut leaf spine placed on top at most rituals demonstrates this belief. The cross divides the rida in two, similar concept too the division of the earth into day and night. Where the two sticks cross is the centre, and from the centre there are movements back to the extremities of the cross and back again to the centre (see photos in Appendix i).

The movements in the Mali are played out in much the same manner. The drummers move with the Buyei throughout the Mali. Commencing from the centre at the western end of the Dabuyaba, from in front of the Guli (inner chamber of the Dabuyaba), the three drummers stand facing the Buyei who plays the Sisira and the participants stand behind the Buyei. The Buyei leading the Mali shuffles backwards and then forward to the centre of the Dabuyaba, with the drummers and participants following the Buyei's every lead (see photos in Appendix i).

At the centre is the maniguati (quiet or silence). The chanting stops and the drums are down to a murmur. The drums represent the spirits of the living; the Sisira played by the Buyei represents the spirits of outerworld, and the ground represents the spirits of the underworld. The drummers with their drums bend down, the drums touching the earth. The Buyei also bends down playing the Sisira to meet the drums and taking turn to play the Sisira in front of each drum, and then back to the middle drum. This is a moment of great significance in the Mali ritual (see photos in Appendix i).

The movement then shifts to the southern door, and it is believed that we are moving our existence. The same shuffling as occurred in the west including the maniguati is repeated at every movement, next to the east, then north and back where it started in the west in front of the Guli and back to the centre. The rhythm is now faster as the movement is repeated clockwise this time, but faster—to the north then the east, then south and back to the west in front of the Guli. On reaching the west, the Mali is over, it has been accomplished and the ancestral spirits have been placated.

Conclusion

The objective of individuals leaving the workshop with full knowledge of calling the Mali was not fully met. However, understanding its significance, timing and the how was generally accomplished and with continuous practice a few experts may emerge. There were calls for more of the same from the participants, as well as workshops on the language and the Dugu itself. Cannon Valentine mentioned that the workshop was historic—a first—so let this workshop be the beginning, and that there be a continuation of this and other areas, led by an individual and/or youth group as we now know that one day or one occasion is not enough.

More than a half of the persons registered were young persons to the age of 21 and relatively young to the age of 40. While there were far more female participants, the presence of males particularly within the youths was heartening.

Lastly, a dagagudou to the ancestors was organized by Cannon Valentine with the assistance of Auntie Felo. This took place in the Guli—so that what we ate and drank was also shared with the ancestors in the spirit of the tradition and Garifunaduo. Some of the information in the “Overview” on the Mali was shared with me by Cannon Valentine.

On behalf of the Buyei Juan Lambey Institute and the Myrtle Palacio family grouping I would like to wholeheartedly give thanks the following persons:

- Cannon Jerris J. Valentine for facilitating and for his contribution of water and ereba
- Mr. Roy Cayetano for his presentation on the Overview of the Garifuna History
- Mrs. Jeremy Jacqueline Valentine Cayetano and Mrs. Lorraine Valentine for contributing the stipend of $90.00 to the drummers
- Mrs. Digna Mariano for preparing the Dabuyaba and Ms. Lilly for her creativity in stretching the food and who was never flustered by the large turnout
- Ms Arreini Palacio Morgan for designing and producing the programme
- Anighi, Aniki and Arreini for the logistics on the ground on that day
- Ms. Gwen Nunez Gonzalez for assisting with the registration on Saturday
- Our elders, Auntie Felomena Arana and Auntie Lilly Garcia for assisting in guiding us along
- Mr. David Craig of CPBL for the juices and cups

Seremei toun Wabuongiute hama Aharigu. Weiriti naritagoun lau chulugua-hama.
Many thanks to all.
